day in an outdoor bulk chemical storage area. An NFS spokeswoman told The Greenville Sun that the acid was contained by a dike that was designed for that purpose.

Nitrile acid can mix with water and cause potentially hazardous fumes.

Spokeswoman Laura Turpin said that as a precaution, employees nearby were redirected to another facility.

Two employees were examined by NFS medical staff. No injuries were reported.

Gatlinburg ponzi appeal rejected

KNOXVILLE — A federal appeals court has rejected former Gatlinburg investment counselor Dennis Bolz's claim that his 27-year prison sentence is too long. In a ruling released Monday, the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati said Bolz's scheme devastated more than 100 victims over more than six years as he misappropriated millions of dollars in a Ponzi scheme.
